BHSU Offers summer Camps for Elementary, Middle and High School Students

SPEARFISH...Beginning in June, Black Hills State University is excited to offer four daytime ACADEMIC Summer Camps for summer learning that will give students the opportunity to learn from expert faculty and experienced business professionals in the areas of STEM enrichment, Photography, Youth Entrepreneurship and Creative Writing.

On June 21-25, 9:00-3:30 students K-5th grade will have an opportunity to experience Camp Invention Recharge 2021, a STEM enrichment program, developed by the National Inventors Hall of Fame. Dr. Sydney Haugland - BHSU Faculty, Contact and Registration Support comments, "Camp Invention provides children with hands-on/minds-on opportunities to explore, create, and invent in relevant ways that will help prepare them to one day change the world!" Scholarships are available and are provided by grants from our generous community partners. and Mrs. Ashtin Griffiee – Spearfish School District Public Educator, Camp Invention Coordinator is the Co-Directors.

The BHSU Photography Summer Camp, June 21-24 9:00-3:30, for high school students, will give participants the opportunity to experience a variety of photography processes. Skott Chandler, Assistant Professor, Mass Communications explains "The course will start with pinhole cameras then move into 35mm film and basic darkroom. The final day the students will use digital cameras and get to make photos in the state-of-the-art BHSU photography studio."

July 6-9 is a 4-day Youth Entrepreneurship Program (YEP) held 9:00-3:30 for high school students, that will immerse High Schoolers in the world of entrepreneurship, making ideas real, and solving problems. . Dr. Jeff Wehrung, Chair for the School of Business and Associate Professor of Entrepreneurship at Black Hills State University commented," Students will share ideas, determine their customers, create a prototype, figure out how to make money, and create a final pitch to show off their work. Mentors will be involved throughout the week to guide students, challenge them, and bring out their best." Hill City entrepreneur Brian Ruppert, who will facilitate the class, states "YEP will create the next generation of problem solvers by giving students the opportunity to learn by doing while they turn their ideas into reality. Class size is limited so don't delay.

The BHSU Creative Writing Summer Camp, July 13-16, 9:00-3:30 for ages 10-17, is four days of fun for the budding young Shakespeare or blossoming Emily Dickinson. Professor Karl Lehman states "Bring a notebook and learn to daydream like a pro, brainstorm a bestseller, answer the riddle of What if?, and chase your muse across page after page as we pen poetry, scribble scripts, and tell tall tales to explore the secrets of the writing craft." Mathew Bauman, BHSU School of Arts and Humanities will be involved also.

All classes are fee based. Class size is limited so don't delay. For more information and to Register online visit www.bhsu.edu/SummerCamps
